[Numb. 891.]

THE South-Carolina Gazette.

From MONDAY June 3d, to MONDAY June 10th, 1751.

LONDON, February 23.

THE society of the free British fishery have contracted for the building of several new busses.

London, Feb. 26. Yesterday the bill for altering our stile was brought into the house of peers.

It is assured that the duty on the British distillery, from 1740, to January 1750, has amounted on an average, one year with another, to 676,125 l. which is upwards of 100,000 l. a year more than it was before.

It is also affirmed, that the private gin-shops amount to upwards of 17,000 within the bills of mortality.

The bill that was yesterday brought into the house of lords for altering our style, was strongly recommended by the noble earl [Chesterfield] who moved for it, and also by another nobleman [Macclesfield] of well-known learning and abilities. The bill was ordered to be read a second time on monday se'nnight, and to be printed.

London, Feb 28. Yesterday the lords of the admiralty gave orders for the shipwrights, carpenters, and other artificers, in his majesty's yards of Deptford, Woolwich and Chatham, to work double tides, in order to fit out a fleet of ten men of war of the line, with all expedition.

The same day their lordships gave orders for the cleansing and opening the several docks, yards, guts, and drains, of all his majesty's yards in the kingdom.

A bill is actually depending, for granting some privilege to poor married persons, in order to increase his majesty's subjects, which bill is ordered to be printed.

London, March 2. Orders are given to make a report of the condition of all the ships of war; and also the state of his majesty's yards, and a quantity of stores for a certain time past.

Since the reformation of the calendar, by Pope Gregory XIII. projects have been several times on foot, in England, for conforming to that reformation, which is manifestly an improvement of the Julian calendar. The great lord Burleigh, in the year 1582 when the new stile first took place, had a consultation upon this subject with several other commissioners, and the famous mathematician John Dee. The paper drawn up in consequence of this consultation is still in being; though the queen did not think proper to put the tenor of it in force. In 1645, while king Charles I. was at Oxford, this affair was again examined by Mr. John Greaves, but the bad state of the king's affairs did not permit him, at that time, to impose any new regulation of this nature upon his subjects. In 1669, when most of the states in Europe, which had 'till then observed the Julian account, embraced the Gregorian, the English, it is thought, had done the same, but for the prejudices of the celebrated Dr. John Wallis; who thought that something essential to popery was veiled under this desire of conformity to the institution of a pope. Since the matter dropped at that time, it has been only talked of without doors 'till the present year.

Upon the whole it is manifest, that though, by submitting to the Gregorian account, we shall be eleven days nearer the truth than we are at present, yet our year will still be above two days behind what it ought to be, if at the time of the reformation the precession of equinoxes had been accounted for as far back as the birth of Christ, instead of the Nicene council, which pope Gregory regarded only.

London, March 5. Yesterday the famous Theodore king of Corsica, who a few years since made such a figure in Europe, was tried at the court of king's bench, Guildhall, on an action for debt of 100 l. and cast.

Great numbers of people resort daily to the foundling hospital, to see the children of it most usefully employed, in making nets for the society of the free British fishery.

London, March 7. Letters from Paris say, that in case matters cannot be kept quiet in the north and Germany, France will assemble an army of observation on the Rhine; a list of the battalions and squadrons which that army is to consist of, is already handed about.

'Tis reported that his majesty will certainly go to Kensington palace the beginning of April.

By letters from Paris we have advice, that a marine academy is establish'd at Brest, and that the members thereof are charged to compile a dictionary of all things relating to naval affairs. The same letters inform us that an arret of the king's council of state is published, forbidding all vessels, French and Foreign, that have taken in cargoes on the coasts of Barbary, to enter any of the ports of France, 'till they have performed a strict quarantine, because there is advice that the pestilence rages in divers places on the coast of Africa.

London, March 9. We hear, that Sir Charles Hanbury Williams, envoy at the court of Berlin, is gone from thence to Dresden, on some extraordinary affairs.

Yesterday there were upwards of four hundred members in the hon. house of commons, on the bill for naturalizing foreign protestants.

Two men of war are ordered to be victualled forthwith, and are to be stationed at Nova Scotia and Boston.

London, March 12. They write from Paris that the British and French courts have agreed upon the measures to be pursued relative to their possessions in America, and have accordingly dispatched orders to their respective governors and commandants in those parts, to behave towards each other in such a manner as becomes friendly powers, and carefully to obviate every thing that might alter the good understanding so happily subsisting between the two crowns.—The same advices take notice, that Marshal Lowendahl is returned to Dresden from Poland, and that he is to remain some time at the Saxon court, in order to thwart underhand, as they surmise, the negociation of Sir Charles Hanbury Williams.

'Tis reported that in the bill for the better regulation of juries, there is a clause proposed, which enacts, that a majority of the jury shall be for the future sufficient for all verdicts, by reason great inconveniencies, as well as delays, have been found to attend the absolute necessity of an unanimous agreement.

Yesterday upwards of 400 members were in the house of commons on the bill for naturalization of foreigners.

A tax has been proposed to be put upon plain and printed fan mounts. Painted ones (not coloured) to pass free as before. A six-penny stamp to be affixed in the midst of a plain, or printed fan mount, and a shilling stamp on a leather one. This may produce a revenue of 10, 20, or 30,000 l. per annum, encourage a very ingenious branch of business, and only hurt about half a dozen paultry plate printers, who are enriching themselves and starving of hundreds.

London, March 14. We hear that 53,927 l. is granted for the support of the forces, guards and garrisons, and the subjects of Nova Scotia, in the year 1751.

London, March 19. When a certain bill had heretofore good prospect of success, such a swarm of locusts as was never before seen in this kingdom (hoping to be naturalized) visited this nation, and very remarkably fix'd their tents in more numerous bodies about St. James's park than in other places: But the bill being rejected, and themselves deserted by their friends and relations, (for Dr. Tinsell, who since hath voted for, then voted against them) these foreigners being disappointed, some of them retired, and others died with grief.

They write from Bute, in Scotland, that the produce of herrings, caught the last season by the boats belonging to that island, being 97 in number, amounts to 1814 l. 1s. 3d.

The bill for altering the stile has passed the house of lords, and is sent down to the commons.
